— TRADITION RANGE

Classic Elegance

The Tradition Range embodies the classic know-how of Rémond Cooperage. Made from oak from the most renowned French forests, notably those of Allier and Vosges, this range offers barrels that combine structure and elegance.

Suitable for both red and white wines, it allows for balanced aging, with controlled extraction of aromas from the wood. This choice of wood, selected for its fine grain, ensures perfect harmony between the barrel and the wine, allowing fruity and floral aromas to fully express themselves without being dominated by the wood. The Tradition Range is ideal for winemakers seeking elegant structure and aromatic subtlety.

— ALLIANCE RANGE

The Complexity of Terroirs

The Alliance Range was born from the blending of woods from different forests, offering a richer and more complex aromatic range. This innovative approach allows for the combination of several oak terroirs to create barrels that bring both finesse and purity.

Intended for complex wines, this range reveals the most subtle aromatic palettes of wines while respecting their natural balance. By combining the distinct characteristics of woods from various origins, the Alliance Range optimizes the expression of the wine, enriching its depth and tannic structure, making it a preferred choice for wines requiring great finesse and more pronounced aromatic expression.

PASSION RANGE

The Exclusivity of Aging Wines

The Passion Range stands out for its exclusive and luxurious character. Designed for the most prestigious aging wines, this limited series uses rare and carefully selected woods.

The barrels in this range are designed to enhance great wines, providing power, elegance, and extended aging capacity. The oaks used for the Passion Range are selected with extreme rigor, and the production process aims to create barrels that offer exceptional aromatic richness and a structure that allows wines to develop their full potential over time.

This range is the perfect choice for winemakers wishing to age long-term wines, combining refinement and power.
